On the third infant was executed bere, sour fant to ber sentence, Elizabeth Willon; charged with the murder of her twin illegitimate infants, on the 12th of October, 1784.

As the case of this meman is of a singular nature, has engrossed the public attention; and as there are warious reports circulating respecting her, the following narrative, drawn up at the request of a person unconnected with her, may be acceptable at this time.

the fields, in a piece of woods a little distance from the road leading from Brandywine to the Turk's Head, two dead infants. Upon enquiry, and from concurring circumstances, there was reason to conclude; they were Elizabeth Wilson's; who some time before was delivered of two children, not far from the place where they were found, and who about eight weeks before, had lest the house with the children; having a design, as she said, of going to Philadelphia. She was accordingly apprehended, and after examination before Justice Taylor, was ordered to this jail.

She was brought to trial the last court of Oyer and Terminer, which commenced the 17th of October last, before the Henerable judge Atlee; circumstances were so strong against her, that she was brought in guilty, and received sentence of death.

Before

Before, at, and after her trial, she persisted in denying the fact; her behaviour was such, in general, as gave reasons to conclude the was innocent of the murder of which she was charged, or was an insensible, hardened creature, and did not expect to die for this crime.

The account the gave than, or the confession she then made, and which was similar to the following one, together with their proceedings thereon, in finding the person charged with murder, were presented to the Henorable the Prefident and Council: who were pleased to grant her a respite for one month: with the respite came her death warrant, ordering her execution on Tuesday the 3d day of January, 1786.

During her confinement she was visited by serious people of different religious denominations, and appeared amazingly ignorant respecting her spiritual state, until some time after she was sentenced, when

This note, in her own hand writing, was found on her table----- O could I but see my own brother ! to speak just a few words to him, to ease my broken heart, that is so difficilled. Oh how hard a thing it is that I cannot see him! We he in my place and I in his, I would go to him, was't ou my hands and knees; but he will not come to me, to speak one word to me, before I depart this life and see man no more: so i just give myself up to the Lord, begging that he would lear no one, and give me life everlasting.
